Megan is Counsel in the firm's Minneapolis office, where her practice is focused on complex first-party property coverage assessments and disputes. She counsels numerous global insurance companies on a broad range of first-party coverage issues that arise in a variety of claim contexts, including those that involve natural disasters, catastrophic losses, machinery breakdown, and construction and builder's risk issues.

Megan also represents insurers in complex, multi-party litigation relating to policy interpretation; the application of coverage exclusions and endorsements; the scope and/or existence of coverage for property damage, time element, and business interruption claims; and allegations of bad faith. Megan has also been involved in liability insurance coverage matters and has experience negotiating favorable subrogation recoveries.
