Hernn represents London Market insurers, Lloyds syndicates, and European reinsurers in complex first-party and third-party (re)insurance matters across multiple jurisdictions. His work includes both advice and litigation across major loss types, with a focus on energy (onshore and offshore), property damage, construction, environmental liability, general liability, and professional liability.

He regularly advises on insurance coverage issues and bad faith claims, particularly in connection with high-value and technically complex exposures. His liability experience includes claims involving environmental contamination (including PFAS), pollution clean-up, catastrophic personal injury, climate-related litigation, class actions, and mass torts. On the property side, Hernn handles losses related to industrial and energy facilities, especially in the US, Latin America and other international markets.

In addition to claims and litigation, Hernn assists reinsurers with monitoring complex claim trends and emerging exposures, and in developing strategic frameworks for handling high-frequency or systemic loss types. This includes cross-border claims protocols, litigation oversight strategies, and regulatory considerations in both established and developing markets.

Hernn's practice spans contentious and non-contentious matters, including arbitration, litigation, and regulatory work. He supports clients on claims across the Americas, Europe, and other international regions, often working on cross-border programs and specialty risk portfolios.

Hernn is bilingual in English and Spanish, and regularly works on matters in both languages.
