Jason Reeves, a partner in Zelles London office, was quoted in the Law360 Insurance Authority article Attys See Huge Financial, Legal Stakes in Hawaii Climate Suit.

The article examined a high stakes case over whether an insurer needs to pay the legal fees of a gas companys subsidiary to beat claims that it contributed to climate change.

The article notes that Insurance company and policyholder attorneys said the massive costs connected to climate change have made questions over what constitutes a covered occurrence in Hawaii a top concern for industry observers. They're also watching to see if Hawaii's foremost justices say greenhouse gasses are pollutants under a pollution exclusion.
